Hello,

The coronavirus or COVID-19 emergency has had a great impact everywhere, including in CDCR. To try to slow down the spread of the virus, CDCR has among other things shut down or modified many programs including visiting, issued educational information (the most recent is attached to this letter), closed or slowed down intake from county jails, and limited transfers between prisons. To reduce crowding, CDCR in March released 3,500 people early. In July, CDCR: (1) awarded 12 weeks of time credit to most people and (2) started programs to consider early release for some (A) within 180 days of release, (B) at “high risk” for medical complications from COVID-19, or (C) within one year of release and housed at certain prisons (see attached information). CDCR has also tried to establish social distancing practices (keeping people six feet apart and establishing groups of eight people in dorms), and provided cloth face coverings which staff and incarcerated people must wear. It also tests staff for COVID-19 at all prisons, and screens staff and sends them home if a nurse says they are sick. It also uses quarantines for incarcerated people who might be sick and medical isolation for those who are. CDCR also plans to offer some patients transfers from dorms to cells.

CDCR has also made changes to medical and mental health care, such as postponing or cancelling on-site and off-site non-essential appointments. The changes have been made to prevent the spread of the virus, to account for staff who are cannot work because they are sick or taking care of family, and so that staff can focus on those who might be or are infected with the virus.

CDCR medical staff tests people for COVID-19. People who report symptoms are tested, others are tested randomly, and sometimes an entire housing unit, yard, or prison is tested. Currently, almost 60,000 in CDCR have been tested. Almost 7,000 have been confirmed to have COVID-19. Forty (40) people have died from the disease, and hundreds hospitalized. Almost 4,700 are said to be “resolved” (meaning they are recovered and no longer considered infectious). A list of prisons with the most confirmed COVID-19 cases is attached to this letter; if your prison is not listed it means it has had very few or no cases. Every day more tests are done and more test results received, so this information changes frequently. If you are not feeling well (see attached symptoms) you should let staff know right away.

We are closely monitoring what CDCR does in response to the virus and working hard to make sure that they provide necessary health care and take necessary preventive measures. You can write us if you have concerns and we will review what you send. We believe CDCR’s crowded conditions cause an unacceptable risk of harm from COVID-19, especially to those over age 65 or who have certain medical (Letter continues on other side of page) conditions, especially in dorms or older prisons. Unfortunately, in March and April the courts denied our motions for an order requiring CDCR to release people, or to submit a plan to keep safe those at highest risk for severe complications from the virus.

We continue to fight for your rights and those of everyone else in CDCR by doing what we can to force CDCR to take steps to reduce the risk from COVID-19, including in the federal class actions known as Plata (which concerns medical care) and Coleman (which concerns mental health care). We believe our work was a major reason CDCR started testing staff for COVID-19, will offer some patients a transfer from a dorm to a cell, and started new early release programs. Also, in early July, the federal judge in the Plata case asked the State to release large numbers of older people from CDCR and said he was considering referring the case to a three-judge court for a possible order to reduce the population. Similarly, the federal judge in the Coleman case asked CDCR to say if there are plans for releasing more people from prison, and indicated a three-judge court for an order requiring releases is possible. As of the date of this letter, the only new CDCR time credit and early release programs are as described in the first paragraph on the other side of this letter and on the last pages attached here.

We are sorry that we cannot help you or any individual get released from prison.

Important Advice Regarding COVID-19 / Coronavirus

The coronavirus is very contagious. Most who get COVID-19 have no or mild symptoms. Some can get very sick or die; the elderly and those with serious medical conditions are most at risk. Experts say it is crucial to avoid close contact with (stay six feet from) people as much as possible to reduce the chances of catching or spreading the virus. Many people who have the virus and are contagious have no symptoms or only minor ones, so you may not know if you or others are infected and can infect others. It is safest to assume that anyone can have the virus, and to reduce contact in order to protect yourself. You should also wash your hands a lot, and not touch your face. If you are not feeling well, let staff know immediately. You can put in a Form 7362 (sick call slip). If you have an emergency or urgent medical care concern, tell any staff member at any time.

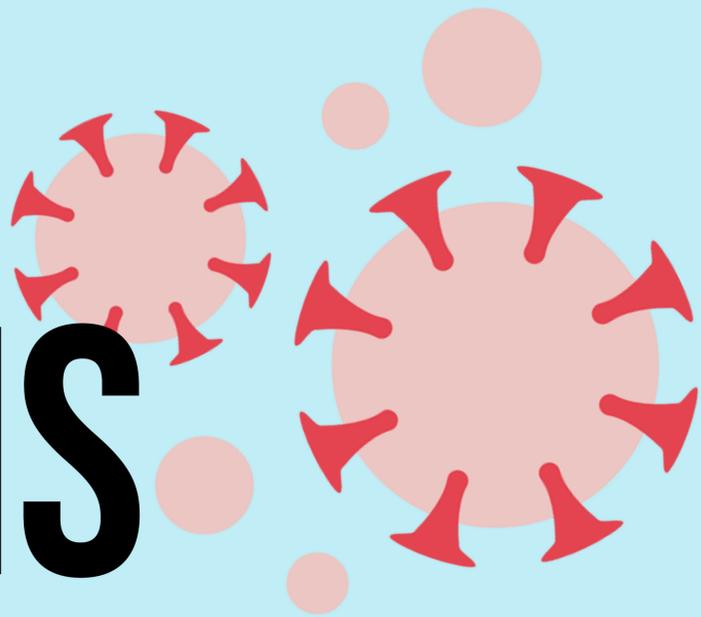

Important Advice Regarding Other Medical or Mental Health Care Issues

You may have a medical care or mental health issue that is not related to COVID-19. You should continue to let staff know about your symptoms or problem, including by putting in a Form 7362. All 7362s with symptoms of a medical condition should result in a face-to-face triage with a registered nurse, although such appointments may be at your cell or dorm or, if for a non-urgent condition, delayed, depending on the circumstances at your prison. You should also continue to receive any medication ordered by your doctor. Pill lines may be run differently, or even delivered cell front, depending on staffing and quarantines. Also, medical staff should promptly respond to medical emergencies, and send a person to a community hospital if needed. Similarly, mental health emergencies should result in a prompt evaluation by a clinician, and a transfer to an actual or temporary crisis bed if necessary. You should tell any staff member at any time if you have an emergency or urgent health care issue.

Please take care, stay well, and look out for each other.

CDCR's 12 week time credit award and new early release programs (July 2020)

In response to COVID-19, to reduce the prison crowding, CDCR is giving a one-time award of 12 weeks of time credit to most people, and started programs to consider early release programs for some who are: (1) within 180 days of release, (2) designated medical “high risk” and within five years of release, or (3) within one year of release and housed at certain prisons. This letter has information about these things.

12 Weeks of Time Credit: Everybody gets a one-time special award of 12 weeks of time credits, unless they (1) are condemned or serving LWOP, or (2) were found guilty of a Rules Violation Report between March 1 and July 5, 2020 (or are found guilty of a pending RVR from that period). The credits are awarded under Title 15, section 3042.6, which allows CDCR to give credit to those who provide exceptional assistance in maintaining prison safety and security.

Early Release Programs: CDCR will consider early release for some who have (1) 180 days or less to serve; (2) at “high risk” for medical complications from COVID-19; or (3) less than one year to serve and housed at certain prisons. These releases are being done under California Government Code section 8658. That law gives the CDCR Secretary the authority to remove or release people from prison in an emergency. There are no official documents regarding these programs. No one is required to be released. The following information is from CDCR's website (see <https://www.cdcr.ca.gov/news/2020/07/10/cdcr-announces-additional-actions-to-reduce-population-and-maximize-space-systemwide-to-address-covid-19/>).

(1) Early release for some people with 180 days or less to serve (all prisons, on-going)

According to CDCR, incarcerated people must meet all of the following criteria to be considered for this kind of early release:

- Have 180 days or less to serve on their sentence
- Are not currently serving time for domestic violence, or a violent or serious crime as defined by law
- Have no current or prior sentences that require them to register as a sex offender under Penal Code 290
- Not have a California Static Risk Assessment score indicating a high risk for violence
- Must submit to COVID-19 testing

CDCR says these release considerations will continue on a rolling basis until CDCR determines they are no longer necessary.

Please see other side of page for information on other early release programs.

(2) Early release for some people at “high risk” for medical complications from COVID-19 (all prisons, on-going)

According to CDCR, people must meet all of the following criteria to be considered for this early release:

- Deemed high risk for COVID-19 complications by CCHCS; this means having COVID weighted score of four or higher: those age 65 and over automatically have four points; those age 64 and younger may have a score of four depending on their medical conditions¹
- Not serving LWOP or condemned
- Have an assessment indicating a low risk for violence
- No high-risk sex offenders (HRSO)
 - HRSO indicates a convicted sex offender who is required to register pursuant to Penal Code Section 290, and has been identified to pose a higher risk to commit a new sex offense in the community, as determined using a standard risk assessment tools for sex offenders.

(3) Early release for some people with less than one year to serve and housed at certain prisons

This early release program only applies to people at San Quentin State Prison (SQ), Central California Women’s Facility (CCWF), California Health Care Facility (CHCF), California Institution for Men (CIM), California Institution for Women (CIW), California Medical Facility (CMF), Folsom State Prison (FOL) and Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility (RJD). We are sorry if you are not at one of these prisons (we have asked CDCR to add other prisons to this list).

According to CDCR, people in the prisons listed above must meet all of the following criteria to be considered for early release:

- Have 365 days or less to serve on their sentence
- Are not currently serving time for domestic violence or a violent crime as defined by law
- Have no current or prior sentences that require them to register as a sex offender
- Not have an assessment indicating a high risk for violence

According to CDCR, people who are 30 and over and meet the eligibility criteria above are immediately eligible for release. Those who meet these criteria and are age 29 or under will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis for release. CDCR will consider medical risk, case factors, and time served, among other factors, in determining whether to expedite release for those in that group.

CDCR says these release considerations will continue on a rolling basis until CDCR determines they are no longer necessary.

+++++ We do not have further information at the present time about these early release programs. As stated above, no one is required to be released. We are sorry, but we are not able to help you be considered for or to get released. If you believe you are eligible for release consideration, we advise you to contact your correctional counselor through open line, a Form 22, or a CDCR 602. -- Prison Law Office (July 2020)
